Preface

Although our language is fluid, it has certain disciplines that constitute an essential part of that language. These disciplines—spelling, grammar, and punctuation—are an essential part of our language, allowing exactness in communication. The imprecise use of words and misplaced punctuation can alter the meaning of a sentence. While this style guide may not convert everyone to the AFJL style, it will serve as a base for establishing clarity and consistency, both of which are key to effective communication.

We have included ten sections to assist both the reader and the contributor. The first section is on punctuation, which allows a thought to be stated more clearly and tells the reader how to read a sentence. Punctuation performs the same function as inflection, pauses, and emphasis do in speaking.

The second section, capitalization, should assist in determining whether to capitalize a word or not. Words may be capitalized according to use; however, a word incorrectly capitalized can cause inconsistencies within a publication and confuse the reader. Likewise, when too many words are capitalized, they lose their importance and no longer attract attention. Therefore, we have chosen specific capitalization requirements for words frequently used in AFJL publications.

A section on compounding is included since there seem to be three stages in the development of compounds. At first the components are written separately. Next they are united by a hyphen, seemingly preparatory for the next stage. When the significance and accent of these compounds become common, they lose the hyphen and one word is born. We have included examples based on the rules for compounding found in this section.

The section on the use of numerals is based on the principle that numbers in figures are easier to understand than in words. However, some of the rules are based simply on typographic appearance.

A section on abbreviations and acronyms is included since they can save space and avoid distracting the reader by use of repetitious words or phrases. Because acronyms come and go, they must be spelled out the first time for the benefit of future readers.

The English language has many words that sound alike and are frequently confused, along with those that just are incorrectly used. Section 8 includes those that can be hazardous to communication if incorrectly used.

We have included sections on references, tables, and submitting a manuscript that contain AFJL idiosyncrasies.

We hope this style guide will assist in establishing consistency without detracting from the personal styles of the writer.

Manuscript Submission

- 1.1 Tables, figures, and photographs should be submitted with the manuscript but not inserted into it. They should be properly titled and numbered consecutively, from the beginning of the manuscript to the end.
- 1.2 The place for each illustration should be indicated in the manuscript.
- 1.3 Figures and photographs downloaded from the Internet do not reproduce satisfactorily.
- 1.4 All material sent to the Journal should be verified and final.
- 10.5 When composing a manuscript, write in a concise, simple, and direct manner.
- 1.6 Acronyms must be spelled out the first time.

Word Usage

a/an	When the word following an article begins with a consonant sound, a is used; when it begins with a vowel sound, an is used. However, when a word begins with an aspirated h , correct usage is a —a history, a hill. Words beginning with vowels that have a consonant sound, call for an a —a unique.
about	He will arrive at about 9 o'clock is not correct. Use at or about but not both.
above	Should not be used in the sense of more than.
absolutes	Some words are not subject to comparison by the use of more, most, or very; for example, eternal or unique.
advance	Used literally to designate a forward position in place or time (advance party or advance payment. Advanced is used figuratively to indicate a position beyond the norm (an advanced program). Advanced planning is redundant; all planning is done in advance.
affect/effect	Has an influence; effect brings a result. Affect can mean to pretend or feign something. Effect is the only one of these words in common use as a noun; affect is used as a noun only in psychology.
agree to/ agree with	You agree to a plan and agree with a person.
all of	All is usually sufficient.
among/ between	Among is used in referring to groups of three or more, and between is used in referring to two persons or things.
amount	A sum total; you have an amount of money and a number of errors.

angry at/ angry with	One is angry at a situation but angry with a person.
anticipate	To foresee; don't use it when you mean expect.
anyone/ anybody	Often mistakenly used with plural pronouns in the predicate. "Anyone who attempts to cross that river is out of their mind" is incorrect. His or her should be used in place of their, or the sentence should be rewritten, "People who attempt to cross that river are out of their minds."
anxious	Used only when anxiety exists. We are eager to write good letters, not anxious.
anyplace	Not good usage; say anywhere.
apparently	Should be avoided.
appear	Usually suggests that which is visible. A woman appears to be young, but she seems to be intelligent.
approximately	Overworked; say about.
around	About $10; around is incorrect.
as	Use as before a phrase. Do not use like, which is used before nouns or pronouns.
as you know	If they know, why tell them?
assure/ ensure	Assure people; ensure things.
basis	Instead of saying as a basis for, simply say for.
be	Be sure to, not be sure and.
because/for/ since/as	Because is used as a conjunction introducing a subordinate clause stating the reason for the action reported in the main or independent clause. "He claimed victory because the people were fleeing the towns." For, since, or as may be used in similar constructions.

between	Between 15 and 20 people not between 15 to 20 people. Between is usually used with two objects; among with more than two. Between you and me, not between you and I.
biannual	Biannual and semiannual mean twice a year. Biennial means every 2 years.
Bible//bible	Bible is preferred when the reference is to the Bible of the Christian faith, but bible is preferred when referring to a standard or highly respected book.
bimonthly	Bimonthly means every 2 months. Semimonthly is used to express twice monthly.
can	Denotes ability; may denotes permission.
claim	Do not use claim as an intransitive verb. Claim ownership but don't claim to be efficient.
compare to/ compare with	These are sometimes interchangeable, but when you are stressing similarities between the items compared, the most common word is to: "She compared his home-made wine to toxic waste." If you are examining both similarities and differences, use with: "The teacher compared Steve's exam with Robert's to see whether they had cheated."
continuously/ continually	Continuously means without interruption; continually means at frequent intervals.
couple	When used collectively to refer to a man and woman, couple is usually followed by a plural verb.
degreed	Should be rewritten to "He has a degree."
demonstrate	Shows is a good plain word to substitute for this.
desire	Wish or want is usually better.
desert/ dessert	Desert means something abandoned or deserted, while dessert means the last course.

die of	“He died of pneumonia” not “He died from pneumonia.”
differ	Differ with a person; differ from something; differ on an issue.
different from	Not different than.
done	Done is not interchangeable with finish.
due to	Try “because of” unless it can be replaced with attributed to.
during	Suggests throughout. In (not during) the meeting, he brought up the question of pay raises.
each other/ one another	Each other is restricted to situations involving two people, while one another applies to more than two persons.
eager	Means desirous; do not confuse with anxious.
either	Either, like neither, is used in speaking of two persons and requires a singular verb.
e.g.	For example.
eminent/ imminent	Eminent means outstanding; imminent means on the verge of happening.
enact	To make into law; enact into law is redundant.
end result	End should be deleted.
ensure/ assure	You ensure things; assure people.
equal	More equitable, not more equal.
essential	An absolute; something is either essential or it is not.
event	Should not be used for incident, affair, or happening, unless the occurrence is particularly noteworthy.
ever so often/every so often	Means frequently and repeatedly, every so often means once in a while.

everyone/ everybody	Use a singular verb and a singular pronoun.
fall off of	Delete of.
farther/ further	Farther indicates distance; further denotes quality or degree. You go farther away; you hear nothing further.
few/fewer	Use with numbers; less is for quantities or amounts. Write fewer pages and say less.
following	He retired after (not following) an outstanding career.
foot/feet	A 6-foot rug, but a man is 6 feet tall.
former	Used to refer to the first of two things; use first to refer to the first of more than two things.
gerund	The name given a verb form ending in ing when it is used as a noun and can be used in any way a noun is used—as a subject of a verb, object of a verb, object of a preposition, or a predicate nominative.
gift	Do not say free gift.
hanged	A man is hanged; a picture is hung.
I	Use I only as the subject of a sentence or after is and was.
i.e.	That is.
I don't think	How can you express an opinion if you don't think?
illusion	Imaginary; delusion means deceit.
imminent/ eminent	On the verge of happening; eminent means outstanding.
imply/infer	To suggest; infer means to draw a conclusion.
important/ importantly	More important, the trucks will arrive before the tanks.

incidentally	Not incidently.
individual	Should not be used indiscriminately for person. Person may be applied to anyone as a general term; an individual is a particular being.
infinitive	An infinitive is split when other words, usually adverbs, are inserted between the to and the verb; do so cautiously.
join	Join together is redundant.
last/latest	Are not interchangeable. Last means final; latest, most recent. The last page of a book but the latest book on the market.
less	An adjective or an adverb meaning not so much. Use fewer when you refer to something that can be counted.
lie/lay	Lie is to be in a lying position; lay means to put something down.
possess	Why not have?
least	Used when more than two persons or things have been mentioned. Use less when only two persons or things have been mentioned. He is the less (not least) forceful of the two speakers.
less/fewer	Less is used for quantities that can be measured, and fewer is used for things that can be counted.
like	Never use like to introduce a subject and its verb. He wrote as (not like) he spoke.
linking verbs	Serve to link a subject and its predicate modifier or noun. Usually a linking verb is followed by an adjective.
locate	You find (not locate) a file.
lots of	Use many.
mad	Crazy or frenzied; do not use it when you mean angry.
material/ materiel	Material is a very general term used for any matter or substance from which something is made. Materiel refers to apparatus or equipment, especially military supplies.

me	Do not substitute I as the object of a preposition.
minimal/ minimum	Minimal is used as a noun in the field of mathematics; it is an adjective in all other instances. Minimum may be an adjective or a noun.
most	Do not substitute for almost. Most all should be almost all.
mutual/ common	Mutual is used when only two persons are involved; common is something shared by two or more persons.
needless to say	If it is needless, why say it?
nominal	A nominal price is so low as to bear no relation to the real cost or value.
none	Can take a singular or plural verb.
nothing	Requires a singular verb in all cases.
not only . . . but also	In sentences with only one main verb, not only should immediately precede the word or phrase it modifies. Where there are two main verbs in one sentence, not only falls in front of the first verb and but also in front of the second verb.
notorious/ notable	Notorious has a connotation of unsavoriness; notable has a connotation of achievement.
number	Use number to refer to items that can be counted; use amount to refer to a general quantity.
number, the/ a	When number is preceded by the, a singular verb is used; if number is preceded by a, a plural verb is used.
off of	Delete of.
older/elder	Elder applies only to persons; older can apply to a person or a thing.
on	Superfluous in stating days and date. He arrived Tuesday, not on Tuesday.

oral/verbal	Oral refers solely to words spoken; verbal may refer to words spoken or written.
inside of/ outside of	Whenever outside or inside is used as a preposition, the of is unnecessary. Outside should not be used in place of except for.
over	Should be avoided when you mean more than in referring to a number.
partake	Partake of means to have a meal; partake in means to participate.
participate	Overused; say take part in.
past	Say last year if you mean the preceding year.
persons/ people	Persons is usually used when speaking of a number of people who can be counted, and people is used when speaking of a large or uncounted number of individuals.
plus/also	Plus cannot be used as a substitute for also as the first word of a sentence.
plus/and	When used to introduce a prepositional phrase, plus does not have the weight of and. "His education, plus his experience, makes him eligible for the promotion." His education and his experience make him eligible for the promotion."
possible/ probable	Possible means capable; probable means likelihood.
practicable/ practical	Anything cable of being done is practicable; practical depends on other factors.
predominantly/ predominately	Predominantly is an adjective; predominately is an adverb.
preposition at the end of a sentence	It is best not to end a sentence with a preposition.
preventive	Better than the irregular doublet preventative.
previous to/ prior to	Why not before?

principal/ principle	The noun means head or chief as well as capital sum. The adjective principal means highest or best in rank or importance. Principle means, truth, belief, policy, or conviction.
prospective/ perspective	Prospective is an adjective meaning anticipated. Perspective is a noun and usually means an impersonal point of view.
proven	Should not be used as the past participle of prove. Use proved. Proven may be used as an adjective.
provided/ providing	Neither should be used if the word if will suffice.
pupil/ student	Used to designate a child in the elementary grades or one studying under the supervision of a master of a particular art. Student is used to designate a person enrolled in a secondary school or college or one pursuing an independent study.
quarter of/ quarter to	A quarter to four; a quarter of a dollar.
quick/ quickly	Both are adverbs.
rarely ever/ seldom ever	Ever is superfluous. Say we seldom fail, not we seldom ever fail.
reason	A sentence beginning with “The reason” should be completed with a noun clause introduced by that. A sentence should not contain both reason and because. Reason why is redundant; there is no need for the why.
recurrence/ reoccurrence	Recurrence means happening repeatedly; reoccurrence means a second happening.
regard/ regards to	Regards is used only in the sense of good wishes, as in “Give my regards to your sister.” Use in regard to or with regard to elsewhere.
regardless	Not irregardless.
secure	Might be better as obtain or get.
somebody/ someone	Use singular verbs and pronouns.

stationery/ stationary	Stationery is a noun meaning paper; stationary, an adjective, means not moving.
sums	Sums of money; numbers of people.
surprise	Indicates a relatively mild reaction to something unexpected; astonish implies being shocked.
talk to/talk with	If you talk to someone, it is a onesided affair; if you talk with a person, the other person contributes to the conversation.
thankfully/ fortunately	Only people can behave thankfully (expressing gratitude). “Fortunately, the heater did not go out during the storm.”
that/which	That should be used to introduce restrictive clauses; which should be used to introduce nonrestrictive clauses.
try to	Not try and.
unique	An absolute.
unknown	An unidentified man but an undisclosed destination.
utilize	To find use for something already in service or to expand productivity by finding new uses; do not substitute utilize for use.
wait for/ wait on	Wait for someone to arrive; wait on (serve) the customer.
whereabouts	As a noun usually takes a singular verb.
wish I were	Not I wish I was.
yourself	Not interchangeable with you.

3

Punctuation

Ampersand

3.1 The ampersand takes the place of and but is used only in prescribed forms: abbreviations of organizations and if a part of a proper name.

3.2 Use an ampersand in tables and figures.

Apostrophe

3.3 Use 's for the possessive of nouns not ending in s.

child's man's children's men's

3.4 Use the apostrophe without an s to form the possessive of nouns ending in s, x, and z.

3.5 Use 's to form the possessive of indefinite pronouns.

Anybody's everyone's neither's

3.6 Use 's with only the last noun for joint possession in a pair or series.

The pilot and the maintainer's plan (the two jointly have one plan).

The pilot's and the maintainer's plans (both have plans).

3.7 Do not use 's to form the plural of numerals, letters, and words being named.

Brackets

3.8 Use brackets to replace parentheses within parentheses ([]).

3.9 Use brackets in direct quotes to interpolate material from another source.

If one studies history, it becomes obvious lessons concerning logistics have been learned.

- 3.18 Use commas to set off nonrestrictive appositives, phrases, and clauses. If it is nonrestrictive (cannot be omitted without altering the mean of the main clause), it should not be set off with commas.

Further good news is that logisticians already have been preaching and practicing a basic framework for years, which can enable success, even in this changed acquisition environment.

- 3.19 Use commas with sentence modifiers, conjunctive adverbs, and sentence elements out of normal word order. Modifiers like on the other hand, for example, in fact, in the first place, I believe, in his opinion, unfortunately, and certainly are set off with commas. Commas are not used when however is an adverb meaning no matter how.

- 3.20 Use commas with degrees and titles and with elements in places and addresses.

Marvin R. Sambur, PhD, wants to usher in a new emphasis on Reality-Based Acquisition.

Edward Aldridge, Jr, said that the best quality weapon system for warfighting will have to come from an industry that is competitive and innovative.

Similar efforts are underway at Hill AFB, Utah.

Write the editor of the Dispatch, 501 LeMay Plaza, Maxwell AFB, Alabama.

- 3.21 Use commas for contrast or emphasis and with short interrogative elements.

The pilot used the military airport, not the municipal one.

The landing was smooth, wasn't it?

- 3.22 Use commas with mild interjections and with words like yes and no.

Well, we didn't think he could accomplish the task.

Yes, he was able to fulfill the mission.

- 3.23 Set off an absolute phrase with commas. It modifies the whole sentence, not a single element within the sentence.

Our mission completed, we returned to our home base.

Dash

3.24

Use an em dash to introduce summaries and to indicate interruptions, parenthetical remarks, and special emphasis.

Bug sprays, citronella lamps, and bug bracelets—all were ineffective that summer.

Three people emerged from the smoke—a fourth had disappeared—and ran for cover.

Use an en dash in listing dates: 1997–2000.

Ellipsis

3.25

Use ellipsis to indicate omission in quotations or text.

3.26

When an ellipsis is used at the end of a sentence, add a fourth point as a period or use other terminal punctuation.

3.27

Do not use an ellipsis in place of commas or dashes to indicate pauses, emphasis, or apposition.

Exclamation Point

3.28

An exclamation point is used for an emphatic comment.

Be careful!

Close the door!

3.29

Do not use other terminal punctuation after an exclamation point.

Italics

3.30

Italicize titles of books (except for the Bible and its divisions), periodicals, motion pictures, paintings, sculpture, musical compositions, and plays.

3.31

Italicize the names of ships and trains.

3.32

Italicize foreign words used in an English context, except words that have become part of the English language. Words like faux pas, amigo, and karate have become a part of the English language. Consult the dictionary.

Parentheses

- 3.33 Use parentheses to enclose loosely related comments or explanations or to enclose figures within a sentence that number items in a series.

Period

- 3.34 A period is used to mark the end of a declarative or imperative sentence.

The two girls walked along the seashore.

Stay by the garden.

- 3.35 Use a period after numerals or letters used to enumerate items in a vertical list.

1. F-15 a. Operation Desert Storm

2. C-5 b. Operation Enduring Freedom

- 3.36 Omit periods after items in a vertical list unless one or more of the items are complete sentences:

Some examples of incompatibility are:

Flammables and corrosives

Acids and caustics

Reactives and ignitables

Flammables and combustibles

- 3.37 Omit periods at the end of a sentence included within another sentence.

The pilots (they had taken off at dawn) were finding it difficult to find a landing field.

- 3.38 The period is omitted in acronyms and after abbreviations, center, side, and running heads but is used in run-in sideheads.

- 3.39 When a declarative or imperative sentence is enclosed in quotation marks or quoted words and phrases fall at the end of a sentence, the period is placed inside the closing quotation mark.

He said, "Today, more than 40 percent of our inventory is at least 20 years old."

It is defined as being "quick," "light," and "sustainable."

Question Mark

- 3.40 The question mark is used after a direct question.
- What time will the fuel arrive?
- When did the troops secure the area?
- 3.41 Question marks may follow separate questions within an interrogative sentence.
- Do you recall the time of the accident? who was driving? when the commander arrived?
- 3.42 A question mark may be used within parentheses to show that a date or figure is historically doubtful.
- It was on 7 August 2002 (?) that the airborne brigade received the supplies.

Quotation Marks

- 3.43 Use quotation marks to enclose direct quotations and dialogue.
- 3.44 Do not use quotation marks for direct quotations of five lines or more. These quotations should be single spaced and indented.
- 3.45 Use single quotation marks to enclose a quotation within a quotation.
- 3.46 Use quotation marks to enclose titles of essays, articles, short stories, poems, dissertations, episodes in television programs, and short musical compositions.
- 3.47 Periods and commas are placed inside quotation marks. Semicolons and colons are placed outside closing quotation marks. A question mark or an exclamation point is placed inside quotation marks only when the quotation itself is a direct question or an explanation. Otherwise, these marks are placed outside.

Semicolon

- 3.48 Use a semicolon between independent clauses not joined by coordinating conjunctions and between coordinate elements with internal commas.
- They are beginning to see results; they should continue to see results with continued emphasis on these techniques.

- 3.49 Use a semicolon with a sentence modifier: The experience was invaluable; on the other hand, it was costly.
- 3.50 Use a semicolon to separate independent clauses that are long and complex or that have internal punctuation.
- 3.51 Use semicolons in a series between items that have internal punctuation.

Virgule (Slash)

- 3.52 Use the virgule to indicate alternatives (and/or, inside/outside).

4

Figures

- 4.1 A figure is used for a single number of 11 or more, with the exception of the first word of a sentence.
- 4.2 When two more like numbers appear in a sentence and one of them is 11 or more, figures are used for each number.
- 4.3 Measurement, time, or money, always expressed in figures, do not affect the use of other numerical expressions within the sentence.
- 4.4 Figures are used for serial numbers.

Measurement and Time

- 4.5 Units of measurement and time are expressed in figures.
- Age—5 years old
- Clock time—1600
- Dates—4 May 2003. If the word from precedes the year or the word inclusive follows it, the word to is used instead of the dash. In dates, AD precedes the year (AD 1000), but BC follows the year (300 BC).
- Decimals—In text a cipher should precede a decimal point if there is no unit, but ciphers should be omitted after a decimal point unless they indicate an exact measurement.
- 0.50 inch; 1.50 inches, .30 caliber, silver 0.900 fine
- Degrees—12 degrees, 150 degrees Fahrenheit
- Within tables and figures—12°
- Longitude and latitude: 77°04'06" E
- Game scores: 1 up, 9 to 5, 2 all

Mathematical expressions: multiplied by 4, divided by 7, a factor of 2

Measurements—3 meters, about 5 yards, 5 by 7 inches, 6 acres, 1 gallon, 12 gauge shotgun

Money—$5.85, 75 cents, but two nickels, four quarters

Percentage—8 percent, 85.5 percent, 4 percentage points

Within tables and figures—8%, 85.5%

Proportion—1 to 5, 1:62,500

Time—8 hours 9 minutes 10 seconds, 3 minutes, 8 days, 4 fiscal years, but four centuries, three decades, one-half hour

Unit modifiers—4-day week, 9-foot pole, $10 million airfield

4.6 Ordinal time precedes day, and day precedes place:

He will speak at noon Friday from the balcony of the hotel.

4.7 The time element usually follows the verb or verb phrase but may precede the verb to avoid awkward construction.

President Bush said yesterday he will veto the bill. President Bush last night called the Iraqi invasion a victory.

Ordinal Numbers

4.8 Military units are expressed in figures except for numbered air forces, armies, fleets, and corps:

First Army, 1st Calvary

Seventh Air Force, 42^d Air Base Wing

Seventh Fleet, 9th Naval District

XII Corps

4.9 When ordinals appear in juxtaposition and one of them is 11 or more, figures are used.

4.10 Beginning with 11, figures are used in text matter for numbered streets and avenues, but in tables, leaderwork, and footnotes, figures are used at all times.

4.11 Punctuation—the comma is used in a number containing four or more digits, except in serial numbers, common and decimal fractions, and astronomical and military figures.

Numbers Spelled Out

- 4.12 Numerals are spelled out at the beginning of a sentence or head. Rephrase sentence to avoid beginning with figures.
- 4.13 A spelled out number should not be repeated in figures.
- 4.14 Numbers used as part of proper names or mentioned with serious subjects such as Executive orders and legal proclamations are spelled out.
- Three Rivers, threescore years and ten
- 4.15 When spelling out numbers larger than 1,000, use the follow form:
- Three thousand and forty
- 4.16 Numbers less than 100 preceding a compound modifier containing a figure are spelled out.
- Twelve 6-inch guns
- 4.17 Indefinite expressions are spelled out.
- The seventies, in his eighties, midthirties. Nearly, about, around, and approximately do not constitute indefinite expressions.
- 4.18 Large numbers are written as follows:
- $10B, $9M, $6K
- 6 million, millions of items
- 4.19 Related numbers appearing at the beginning of a sentence, separated by no more than three words, are treated alike.
- Eighty or ninety people attended the airshow.

Fractions

- 4.20 Fractions standing alone or followed by of a or of an are generally spelled out.
- Three-fourths of an inch, one-half inch, one tenth
- 4.21 Fractions are in a unit modifier:
- ½-inch pipe, ¼-mile run

Roman Numerals

4.22

A repeated letter repeats its value, a letter placed after one of greater value adds to it, a letter placed before one of greater value subtracts from it, a dashline over a letter denotes multiplied by 1,000.

Tables and Figures

- 5.1 The object of a table is to present, in a concise and orderly manner, information that cannot be presented as clearly in any other way.
- 5.2 Tabular material should be kept as simple as possible so that the meaning of the data can be easily grasped by the user.
- 5.3 To avoid burdening tabular text, commonly known abbreviations are used in tables. Metric and unit-of-measurement abbreviations are used with figures.
- 5.4 The names of months when preceded by the day are abbreviated.
- 5.5 The words street, avenue, place, road, square, boulevard, terrace, drive, court, and building, following name or number, are abbreviated. For numbered streets, avenues, etc, figures are used.
- 5.6 In columns containing both dollars and cents, ciphers will be supplied on right of decimal point in the absence of figures.
- 5.7 Where a column consists of single decimal, supply a cipher on the right, unless the decimal is a cipher.
- 0.6
- 0
- 3.0
- 4.2
- 5.0

- 5.10 Footnotes to tables are numbered independently from text footnotes.

- 5.11 Superior figures are used for footnote references, beginning with 1 in each table.

Formulas and Symbols

6.1 The increased use of signs and symbols and their importance in technical and scientific work necessitate standardization.

6.2 Certain symbols are standardized—number symbols (the digits, 0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9); letter symbols (the letters of the alphabet, a, b, c, d, etc); and graphic symbols (the mathematical signs +, -, , x ,).

6.3 The signs +, -, , x , and, etc, are closed against accompanying figures and symbols. When the x is used to indicate “crossed with” or magnification, it will be separated from the accompanying words by a space.

The equation A+B

The result is 4 x 4

20,0005,000

Early June x Bright (crossed with)

x 4 (magnification)

Symbols with Figures

6.4 In technical publications, the degree mark is used in lieu of the word degree following a figure denoting measurement.

6.5 Following a figure, the spelled form is preferred. The percent symbol is used in areas where space will not allow the word percent to be used.

In that period, the price rose 12, 15, and 19 percent.

Not, In that period the price rose 12 percent, 15 percent, and 19 percent.

6.6 Any symbol set close up to figures, such as the degree mark, dollar mark, or cent mark, is used before or after each figure in a group or series.

$5 to $8 price range
5'-7' long, not 5-7' long
3 cents to 5 cents (no spaces)
2 to 7; 2 deg.1 deg.
but
Sec. 12 (thin space)
from 15 to 25 percent

Letter Symbols

6.7 Letter symbols are set in italic or in roman without periods.

Equations

6.8 In mathematical equations, use italics for all letter symbols—capitals, lowercase, small capitals, and superiors and inferiors (exponents and subscripts); use roman for figures, including superiors and inferiors.

6.9 If an equation or a mathematical expression needs to be divided, break before +, -, =, etc. However, the equal sign is to the left of other beginning mathematical signs.

6.10 A short equation in text should not be broken at the end of a line. Space out the line so that the equation will begin on the next line; or better, center the equation on a line by itself.

6.11 An equation too long for one line is set flush left, the second half of the equation is set flush right, and the two parts are balanced as nearly as possible.

6.12 Two or more equations in a series are aligned on the equal signs and centered on the longest equation in the group.

6.13 Connecting words of explanation, such as hence, therefore, and similarly, are set flush left either on the same line with the equation or on a separate line.

- 6.14 Parentheses, braces, brackets, integral signs, and summation signs should be the same height as the mathematical expressions.
- 6.15 Inferiors precede superiors if they appear together; but if either inferior or superior is too long, the two are aligned on the left.

Endnotes and References

- 7.1 Avoid footnotes as much as possible as they are a hindrance to smooth reading. Place explanatory matter in parentheses in the text.
- 7.2 Articles should list the name of the author, title of article and periodical, edition, volume, chapter, and page.
- Lt Col William Frederick, "Lessons Learned in the Gulf War," Air Force Journal of Logistics, XXI, No 1, 23.

Abbreviations and Acronyms

- 9.1 Abbreviations are used to save space and to avoid distracting the reader. There are three categories of abbreviations.
- Acronym—a pronounceable word formed by combining initial letters (United States Air Forces in Europe, USAFE) or syllables and letters (Notice to Airmen, NOTAM) of the parent words.
- Brevity Code—a combination of letters designed to shorten a phrase, sentence or group of sentences (days delay en route authorized chargeable as leave, DDALV).
- Contraction—an abbreviation formed by omitting certain letters or syllables and bringing together the first and last letters (receipt, rcpt).
- 9.2 Write abbreviations for single words in lowercase letters (attach, atch; hospital, hosp).
- 9.3 Avoid separating elements of an abbreviation by spacing. Use a hyphen if separation is necessary (Canada-United States, CAN-US).
- 9.4 Use the same abbreviation for singular and plural forms (attachment, attachments, atch). When ambiguity could result, form the plural by adding a lower case. Do not use an apostrophe to form the plural.
- 9.5 Avoid abbreviating verbs.
- 9.6 Use the ampersand in an abbreviation when and must be included (research and development, R&D).
- 9.7 An abbreviation follows the capitalization and hyphening of the word or words abbreviated.

- 9.8 Don't abbreviate words and phrases just for the sake of doing so when brevity is not of the essence.
- 9.9 Periods are not used with abbreviations or acronyms except for i.e and e.g.
- 9.10 US is used in the adjective position but spelled out when used as a noun. This is a good rule of thumb with use of other acronyms unless they are lengthy.
- 9.11 Names of major commands and units are spelled out the first time but acronyms are used thereafter.
- 9.12 All states of the United States, the Canal Zone, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands are spelled out except in tables. The two-letter state or province is used in tables—Tallahassee FL, Vancouver BC.
- 9.13 The words street, avenue, place, road, square, boulevard, terrace, drive, court, and building are not abbreviated except in tables and figures.
- 9.14 Spell out senator, representative, commodore, and commandant.
- 9.15 The following and similar forms are used after a name:
Esq, Jr, Sr,
II and III are not preceded by a comma
Degrees: LLD, MA, PhD
- 9.16 Sr and Jr should not be used without given name or initials.
- 9.17 Names of months are abbreviated in footnotes, tables, and figures but are spelled out in the manuscript.
- 9.18 Compass directions are abbreviated as follows:
NE, NNW, SW
- 9.19 Generally, do not abbreviate the names of cities or counties.
- 9.20 Do not abbreviate fort and mount except in tables and figures.
- 9.21 Generally, abbreviate saint or sainte in proper names.

St Louis, Sault Ste Marie

- 9.22 Spell out association, bureau, department, and division.
- 9.23 Spell out military, police, and fire ranks preceding names except in tables, figures, and endnotes.
- 9.24 As a rule, do not continue using the rank before a name in subsequent references; use simply the name. If the rank must be used with the name in a subsequent reference, use General Blank instead of Brigadier General Blank.
- 9.25 Spell out governor, lieutenant governor, senator, representative, professor, and reverend and their plurals preceding a name.
- 9.26 Use the abbreviations Dr, Mr, Mrs, Ms preceding a name.
